Itake Phenomena.

We call the following interesting matter relative to the Phenomena of the Lakes, from our exchanges.

A writer upon this subject, says:

"An option is quite prevalent in this country that the water to the Lakes rises gradually for says in the N Ford Change parts of the Manne parts of the N Ford Change parts of the Manne parts of the N Ford Change parts of the Manne parts of the N Ford Change parts of the Manne parts of the N Ford Change parts of the Lakes are produced in relation to it for the last sixty-free years, and becomes to the conclusion that there is no require septential or other great flood if any of the great lakes. He is inclined to believe that differences in harometrical pressure in different parts of the lakes, and luster attractions at the litues of the lakes, and luster attractions at the litues of the lakes, and luster attractions as the litues of the recent and autumnal equinozes, may have some influence in causing the delity sacillations and the other irregular transient tides."
